Creation & Chaos in Hinduism

A potter gently shapes a lump of clay upon his wheel. A carpenter hews and joins measured pieces of wood.
Creation, we see, is often a process of reasoned thought and careful construction. And yet, just as often, creation arises in far more unpredictable circumstances from chaos, transgression, and failure. In this lecture, we will examine the interplay of creation and chaos in Hindu narratives, paying special attention to the story of the churning of the ocean.
